SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT

July 15, 1922 to Feb. 1st, 1923

A person's first half year in any public position may be called the period of getting acquainted. A superintendent can accomplish very little constructive work until he becomes acquainted with the teachers, the needs of all his schools, the particular problems in each school, and the extent of the peoples interest in the education of their children. Successful schools are possible when there is complete cooperation among teachers and school officials, and when such officials and teachers have the loyal support of the community. This ideal condition appears to exist at the present time.

Since the opening of the fall term I have made 98 official visits to Pittsburg schools, and have studied the needs and dispositions of the individual pupils in order that I may work for their advancement and progress.

Our high school is growing in numbers and interest each year. It has State approval and is entitled to full community approval and support. A good high school is an asset to any community, and the money invested in it pays large dividends in the increased efficiency of its graduates as future citizens.

All of the schools are doing excellent work, a good spirit manifest, and the progress of the pupils is very gratifying. Attendance in general is good, although it has been interfered with by sickness during the winter term. There are a few cases of absence, due to causes other than sickness. Parents should see that a child is in school every day when not sick.

I hope that all pupils who are finishing the eighth grade this year will attend high school some where as a high school education will greatly increase a young person's chances of making the most of himself.

It is a superintendent's duty to look out for the welfare of the children and work for their progress. Such is my purpose, and in carrying out this purpose I ask the whole hearted support of the citizens of Pittsburg. Efficient schools are the chief agents of progress, the safeguard of democracy, and the backbone of civilization. We have good schools and can continue to improve them if we all work together.

In closing, I wish to thank the teachers for their interest in the schools, and for their earnest efforts in promoting the welfare of the children.

Respectfully submitted

William F. Skelton, Supt.
